God-Child

In memory of Jennifer Nancye Tomlinson 29.10.98 – 29.12.98

James Humberstone 1999 – 2000

About the work:

This piece was written in memory of my god-daughter who died aged only two months. Being involved with a SIDS (Sudden Infant Death Syndrome) death is a very difficult thing. One spends the initial months of a child's life getting to know them. Every gurgle, every movement, every expression, every sleep, every cry, every unfocused gaze is a revelation. But to then lose that marvel is dreadful. It is an end during the beginning.

And it is still today not fully understood. Which is why I ask all orchestras who perform this piece to donate a portion (however small) of their takings to their nearest SIDS foundation (if in doubt email the Sydney office: sydney@sidsaustralia.org.au). And my own royalties from the publication of this piece go directly to SIDS Australia.

This piece is short, lasting only just over 10 minutes. While serious and introverted in nature, the piece is celebratory. The powerful opening rises to establish the motif which pervades the rest of the piece – one of happiness despite the sadness and melancholy felt. After all, if such a short life does bring so many delights, even if sad at its ending, should we not be happy that it was such a perfect life? How many humans can claim they spent all of their lives making every person they knew happy?

- James Humberstone

Score edition II. Parts available.

Orchestration

2 Flutes
2 Oboes
2 Clarinets in Bb
Bass Clarinet in Bb
2 Bassoons
4 Horns
2 Trumpets (only 1 necessary)
2 Trombones (only 1 necessary)
1 Bass Trombone
1 Tuba
Timpani
Percussion: Bass Drum, Suspended Cymbal
             Optional Tubular Bells and Marimba
Violins I
Violins II
Violas
Cellos
Double Basses

Recommended minimum 12 1st Violins, 12 Second violins, 8 Violas, 6 Cellos and 3 Double Basses.
2nd Trumpet and Trombone not compulsory, nor the optional Tubular Bells and Marimba parts. The Marimba part can also be played on a Xylophone.

For further information contact James Humberstone james@composerhome.com

For Matt, Kate, Damon and Ethan

God-Child

In memory of Jennifer Nancye Tomlinson 29.10.98 - 29.12.98

James Humberstone